“ I was a year behind Robert in school. I went out for football and I was very small. I weighed about 120 pounds. During practice scrimmage I was put into the line beside Robert. He was at tackle and I was at end. During the drills we were playing defense and the boys on the other side had the job of blocking us. They were beating me up pretty bad, and Robert, feeling pity for me, asked the others to ease up on me. That respite enabled me to maintain the courage to keep trying to make the team. I stuck, and even made a starter the next year after gaining about fifteen pounds.

I have thought many times over the years about Robert's kindness and what it meant to me, and I have always hoped to see him again when I went to the school reunions, but never was lucky enough to be there when he was.

I will always remember him, and I am lucky to have known him in school.
